At a well attended and enthusiastic meeting held in the Town Hall last Friday evening The Macleod and District Board of Trade was duly organized.

Following Mr. MacDonald, W. H. Shield, M. L. A., A. V. Harris and J. Hicks addressed those present, expatiating on the necessity of the organization and the benefits to be derived therefrom.

After general discussion following the speeches it was decided to form "The Macleod and District Board of Trade," and the following officers were elected:

The executive was instructed to get into action upon several specified matters of vital interest to the Town and District.

The organization is starting out on its mission of welfare with great enthusiasm and gives promise of being a live wire factor in the best interests of the town and district.

IN REVOLT AGAINST PROHIBITION

New York, June 4.—(C. P.)—Three days after the signing by Governor Smith of New York of the repeal of the Mullan-Gage prohibition enforcement law, four states, according to the New York Tribune, are more or less definitely in revolt against the eighteenth amendment.

The states are Massachusetts, Connecticut, Illinois and Wisconsin. Others, including virtually all the great industrial states, are expected by the wet forces to line up behind these before the week is out.

Governor Smith's action in affixing his signature to the repeal, the Tribune says, "appears to have given the anti-dry forces in all quarters precisely the tangible initiative toward concrete action which during the months of grumbling, they have been awaiting."

In Massachusetts acting league, this will result immediately in action which it is believed will ultimately let light wines and beer into the Bay state.

GIANT SUB WILL MOUNT 12 INCH GUN

London, June 4.—Britain will have the largest and most powerful submarine in the world, when the mysterious ship, submarine XI, is completed. The giant under-water craft which will soon be launched at Chatham will displace 2,780 tons and 3,600 tons when submerged. This displacement is greater by more than a thousand tons than that of any foreign submarine now afloat.

The XI will mount a 12-inch gun. She will be able to bombard an object at long range and then slip quickly beneath the waves.

With her great speed and giant power which will surpass anything in her class, she will be more than a match for most surface vessels.

The submarine was laid down only 18 months ago and the British admiralty had congratulated her builders on the speed with which they have done their work.

TRIDER ACQUITTED

After considering the evidence for fifteen minutes, the jury in the case of Elmo E. "Ike" Trider, who was charged with the murder of Charles M. Paris at Drumheller on May 2, returned to the courtroom at 9:45 on Friday night and gave Mr. Justice Walsh their verdict of "not guilty."

The announcement of the verdict by Robert Corrigan, jury foreman was greeted by a burst of applause from the crowd which packed into every corner of the stuffy courtroom. The sheriff immediately called for order and Trider, a little pale after the suspense of the day, stood up while the judge acquitted him.

McGillivray Pays Fine
Following his acquittal A. A. McGillivray, counsel for Trider, informed the judge that his client was under conviction on a liquor charge and had been sentenced at Drumheller to pay a fine of $200 and costs or three months imprisonment. This fine, he informed the judge, had not been paid, but with the permission of His Lordship, Mr. McGillivray intimated that he was prepared to pay this money. Permission was given by the judge, and Trider walked from the court a free man.

OSCAR MARQUIS DROWNED AT MACLEOD
Oscar Marquis, a farmer of Mud Lake and an old timer of 33 years standing in the district, was a victim of the floods here Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Marquis was coming into town and in crossing the small culvert south of the west traffic bridge which was under water through the Old Man River flood for about 400 yards. The team he was driving was swept off the trail, and Mr. Marquis became entangled under the rig, and in a barbed wire fence against which the buggy washed.

He was drowned as was one of the horses. The body of Mr. Marquis was found under the buggy.

The funeral occurred at Macleod at 7 o'clock on Sunday evening and interment took place in the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Finger prints have proved the downfall of many criminals. Burglars have been using collodion on their hands to prevent leaving telltale finger prints and it works, for a short time ago a gang in New York plundered ten stores and escaped in a short space of time.

Addresses Women's Canadian Club

On Monday afternoon Hon. Mrs. Parlyb, minister without portfolio in the Alberta Government, addressed a large gathering of the members of the Women's Canadian Club at the Macleod, Edmonton, at an afternoon tea. Mrs. Parlyb spoke on the development of a national spirit in Canada, and gave a splendid and patriotic address, which was interestingly received by the ladies present. In the motion conveying a vote of thanks, one of the speakers expressed the opinion "that in Hon. Irene Parlyb the farmers have a wonderful representative."

Scenes Showing Divers At Work

Have you ever seen pearl divers at work? Comparatively few persons have. You may experience the next best thing when you see the operation of the pearl divers in "Ebb Tide," George Melford's latest Paramount production, which comes to the Empress Theatre next Wednesday for a two day run.

The scene of the operations is an island in the South Seas, controlled by the cruellest man in that part of the world. One may see the divers at work gathering the pearls, many of which are shown in the picture, and the possession of which involved not only one but several tragedies.

"Ebb Tide," adapted from Robert Louis Stevenson and Lloyd Osbourne's story, is a gripping, thrilling and fascinating picture. It runs the gamut of human emotion, with the play of the strong passions predominating. Assuredly it is a really big and worth while picture, "Ebb Tide" has one of the most impressive casts in screen history, featuring, as it does, Lee, James Kirkwood, Noah Beery, George Fawcett, Robert Hatton and Jacqueline Logan.

Canoeing in Britain

Prof. W. L. Carlyle, manager of the Prince of Wales ranch at High River, has returned from a trip to the Old Country, and has brought with him some high bred horses, cattle and sheep with which to stock the prince's ranch. Included in the first shipment is Will Somers, one of the best known and most consistent winners on British racecourses of recent years.

Prof. Carlyle speaks encouragingly of the British market for Canadian stocker cattle, and says the British importer demands wellbred stock, and advises Canadian breeders and ranchers to pay more attention to breeding what the British market requirements call for.

Alberta Women's Institutes

The annual gathering of the members of the Alberta Women's Institutes has been in session at the University, Edmonton, this week. An idea of the scope of the work was gleaned from the report of Miss Jessie McMillan, superintendent. In 1932 the total attendance at all short courses arranged through this medium was 5801, and the total attendance at short courses and lectures and demonstrations 15,590, 325 places were visited and 696 meetings held. Two short courses on foods and cookery and twelve demonstration lectures were given. The sewing short courses numbered 26, and the demonstration lectures 392. One handicraft course and six demonstration lectures on handicrafts were given.

The number of women's institutes which have applied for the grant is 231, and on their application forms they give their financial returns as $66,332.87. According to the proportional subscription for the 231 institutes it is estimated that the 232 institutes would have represented $80,977.80.

RED CROSS AT G. W. V. A. CARNIVAL

In the Great War Veteran's Spring Carnival held in the City of Calgary, the Alberta Division of the Canadian Red Cross Society was represented by a float of considerable beauty, which appealed greatly to the thousands of people who lined the city streets and waited for hours to see the procession pass. A large Red Cross surmounted the central figure, which was a fine personification of the famous phrase "The Greatest Mother in the World."

The float was a beacon light which could be seen far and near, in the darkness of the night. On either side of this beautiful "Greatest Mother" were two standards calling attention to the wonderful way that the Red Cross serves humanity today. One emblem read "Crippled Children" the other "Junior Red Cross Children's Hospital."

This short statement in its simplicity spoke to the hearts of the thousands of bystanders, many of whom were personally acquainted with some of the little sick ones who are being mothered and nursed back to health and strength under the ideal conditions of the hospital.

BANDITS IN CHINA ATTACKING FOREIGNERS

So far as China is concerned, banditry is probably the second oldest profession, and those who are astonished at its recent manifestation in Shanghai are not aware of Chinese conditions. What is novel about the present demonstrations is the fact that they were directed against foreigners. Hitherto it has been rare for a Chinese bandit to interfere with a foreigner. He has been regarded as too dangerous to molest because of the alacrity with which strong foreign Governments hasten to defend their nationals, and perhaps in the process get a stronger foothold in China. To the Chinese the foreigners are still the "devils" that they were in the days of the Tai Ping rebellion, but they are feared and respected. Even the recent outbreak was not unexpected by foreign residents in Shanghai. It was indeed predicted after the Japanese had left the peninsula. The Japanese held the Shantung bandits in check or obligation to their own countrymen. When they left it is estimated that there were 24,000 active bandits in Shantung with whom the Chinese authorities were utterly unable to cope.

Part-Time Bandits

The bandits of China are as a rule the creature of weather conditions. When rains fall moderately so that crops are good there are few bandits, except the professional criminals who remain bandits all the year round. These, however, are the mere nucleus of the bandit army. When there is a crop failure, tens of thousands of Chinese farmers turn bandit for the time being and prey upon the neighboring towns and villages. It is their avocation between crop seasons, and they willingly return to the tilling of the soil if the next year promises a good harvest. This double occupation is of great service to them when the Government, fearing that banditry in a certain district is verging upon rebellion, sends troops to suppress them. When the troops arrive the bandits have vanished. They are bending their backs over their few poor acres, their weapons hidden and all signs obliterated of their lawless calling. They are also aided by the willingness of the soldiers to hunt them to the desert and become bandits themselves. It is said that thousands of the Shantung bandits were at one time soldiers.

Soldiers Turn Bandits

This makes them all the more formidable. They know how to use weapons; how to organize; the value of discipline in their own ranks and the necessity of having competent leaders. Not long ago a meeting of Chinese Chambers of Commerce in Shanghai passed a resolution calling upon the Chinese Government to suppress the traffic in arms and ammunition. Without this trade the bandits would not be so dangerous. As matters stand, they are likely to be quite as well armed as any force sent against them. Chinese merchants find it profitable to buy rifles and ammunition and smuggle them to the bandits. Some noted bandit leaders have bought rifles in wholesale quantities from foreign manufacturers and as a result of corrupt Chinese officials have had them delivered safely. Deserting soldiers contribute to the bandit army. When they are discharged without back pay turn bandits and bring to the camp their military experience as well as their weapons of destruction.

Bandits Stronger Than Army

Economic reasons have been responsible for the failure of the Government to stamp out the bandits. When soldiers are sent against them as likely as not the soldiers have not been paid for months, and enter upon their task with no enthusiasm. Often deserting if they find that the district where the bandits operate is likely to reward the industrious hold-up. The authorities at Tsinan, the capital of Shantung, when appealed to for protection, admitted frankly that they could do nothing. The bandits were stronger than the available military force.

When sufficient pressure has been applied to the Pekin Government local authorities have sent armies into the bandit districts and these have returned with a creditable number of heads as fruits of their zeal. As a result these heads were once the property of offending peasants whom the soldiers found it a great deal easier to kill than bandits. On other occasions the soldiers have been worse than the bandits and the citizens have often made requests that they should be withdrawn.

The Home of Bandits

Shantung for generations has been the home of bandits, because it is so seriously overpopulated. It would appear that many thousands find it impossible to earn a living honestly, and the Chinese, like other people, choose to earn a dishonest living rather than starve. Famine and flood always add to the numbers of the bandits, who, as a rule, are said not to be cruel, although tales of torturing victims for ransom have been heard. From time immemorial the Chinese worthypersons have found the best way to deal with bandits is to pay them blackmail. If they hand over regular sums to the local bandit chief they will not be molested. At one time they sought to combat the bandits by Ku Klux methods. They formed many secret societies, but these the bandits also joined, so that the raids of the societies were known in advance, and when an attack was made the villagers often found as many bandits as honest men in their ranks. Until China once more has a strong Government in Pekin whose edict runs throughout the country, banditry will remain a plague.

I will presently set more in hand."

"Do so," quoth the Queen, "for no more cloth stockings."

GLENWOODVILLE NEWS

The surveyors from the head camp, M. Welch and his company, surveyed the ditches through Glenwood Township. We expect now to soon be able to irrigate trees gardens etc., but during the past few days the rain has been splendid, with sufficient moisture for a while. About 2 inches of rain fell in the two heavy storms of May 30th and 31st.

May 27th. Born to Mr. and Mrs. William Sommerfeldt, a son at our District Hospital with Dr. Woolf in attendance. Mother and child are doing well.

The Leavitt Baseball League team came over to play our boys on the 30th. Too much rain to play ball but their orchestra played for the dance at night and the game was postponed until June 2nd. The score was 21 to 2 in favor of the Glenwood team. The orchestra from Leavitt played at the dance again at night which was given by the Boy Scouts.

The Glenwood baseball team are sporting for the first time, June 2nd, their new uniforms "grey and green." They should play well now. Their suits cost them about $90.00

An auction sale of the horses, wagons and camp outfit of a Mr. Macleach from Medicine Hat took place Saturday, June 2nd, at the residence of Edwin Leavitt. Mr. Frank Brown of Cardston was the auctioneer. Mr. J. Smith bought 25 head of horses. Everything listed was sold.

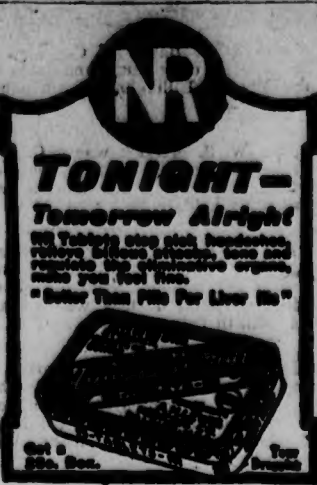

President Edward F. Wood, Mr. Z. W. Jacobs, Mr. D. O. Wight and wife, Mr. Clyde Jones and wife and Mrs. A. Layton were our visitors from Cardston for the Sunday Services. Pres. Wood, Mr. Jacobs and Mr. Wight gave some splendid talks, while Mr. Jones who is a professional with the violin gave us some excellent music. His wife, Annie with her beautiful contralto voice sang three splendid selections. Mrs. Layton who is an artist on the piano, played a sacred solo, also accompanied all the music. Miss Josephine and Rulon Leavitt sang a duet, "Supplication." The last selection was "The Irish Lullaby" a favorite of Pres. Wood and several others, sung by Mrs. Jones. In all the programs, this was the best we have had for a long time, the attendance was about 175. All were very attentive and very appreciative.

June 4th. The rain is still welcome. It rained nearly all night and is still storming. This is the most moisture we have had in these parts for about 7 years.

HOW TO START A FLOWER GARDEN

After the necessary grading is done, decide on and mark out the main walks. These may be grass or gravel at the discretion of the grower. If they are to be of gravel, remove six inches of the surface grass on soil (more if you care to) and replace with gravel. The space assigned to the lawn should be dug over and may be seeded to grass in April or early in May. Assuming there is grass already present and in fair condition cut it as short as possible and spread over a thin layer of rotten manure and fine soil. If swept about at weekly intervals, this will work in the uneven parts and level the ground.

A Good Beginning
Whether it is intended to grow flowers, fruits or vegetables, the ground should be spaded to a depth of 18 inches at least, or better still, trenched to a depth of 1 1/2 to 2 feet, and rough, strawy manure worked into the bottom soil. With the surface eighteen inches, well rotten manure and bone meal should be incorporated. A good beginning makes all the difference in the ultimate success or failure of a garden. The next procedure will be to decide where the hedges, if the space warrants them, are to be, to separate the vegetable plots from the flower borders and lawn. There are several good evergreens available for this purpose. The Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, will supply a pamphlet on this subject on request.

The Japanese rose, Rosa rugosa, provides a useful informal hedge. The rambling roses make splendid screens trained to a wooden trellis or skeleton wooden fence, but require winter protection. If the garden is large enough a pergola of roses and other climbers is always an attraction, with perhaps a creeper-covered arbor at one end. The path beneath the pergola may be paved with stones of varying sizes. Failing a pergola, introduce arches and pillars (rough poles eight to ten or twelve feet high) for rambling roses. As the ground will be newly trenched it will be better to defer planting the roses until it settles.

What Plants to Choose
What to plant to secure a permanent, and easily cared for home garden is the question of questions. It is a long process to find out for oneself what plants can be relied upon for vigor and permanence. Naturally, locality is one determining factor. There will be few mistakes if varieties locally accepted as hardy and in every way worth while are selected for the foundation of the garden. Kinds which attract because of personal interest or rarity can be experimented with at leisure once we have secured the garden feeling with the trusty, generous, long-serving kinds. Familiarity and commonness are in no sense to be avoided. The plants which have longest served mankind are richest in legend and folklore and so are most suggestive in the home garden.

Amateur's Sheet Anchor
A border of mixed perennial flowers is frequently described as the amateur's sheet anchor, providing flowers during the spring, summer and fall months and so are most out. It depends how much is to be spent in stocking a garden whether quantities of perennial roots should be purchased, or most of them raised from seed. It is not a difficult matter to grow most of the perennials from seed, which if sown in the late spring or early summer, will produce plants that will flower the following year.

The First Year
The first year the best display of flowers will be from annuals sown under glass during April or outside where the plants are to flower during May. A selection may include Asters, Stocks, Sweet Peas, Zinnias, Clarkias, Godetias, Larkspurs, Calendula, Officialis, Cornflowers, Poppies, Candytuft, Coreopsis, Nemesis and Mignonette. To these add bulbs of gladioli, and the grower will be rewarded by an ample display of bloom during the first summer of his gardening operations.

DANCING CRAZE HAS AVENUE-ORIGIN

Dancing is an invention probably preceding the development of music, and when aspiring man first developed the religious idea it was expressed in the dance. In the Bible, dancing is recorded and approved, indeed enjoined. David among others expressed his religious ecstasies by means of the dance. In his time there were various musical instruments and the dancer no doubt kept time to the tune, or illustrated the music with his feet and body. That a dance can create or sustain illusions and emotions was early discovered. This led to the establishment of the Moslem order of Dancing or Whirling Dervishes, called originally the Mevtevitae. The Dervishes were set apart from their fellows, being esteemed of a superior holiness. When they danced they continued until they fell exhausted and perhaps frothing at the mouth partly as a result of the exercise and partly religious mania. Frequently as they bounded about they nourished themselves on live snakes, coals and glass. Curiously enough they were the most tolerant of all the sects, as a result of their fanaticism having found outlet in a sort of self torment.

The Morris Dance

The dancing mania spread from the Dervishes to the Moors at the time when they were the rulers of Northern Africa. The Moorish horsemen to celebrate a military victory would throw themselves from their horses and dance in the desert. They found that they could produce a barbaric sort of music if they tore the metal trappings from the saddle and clashed them together. It was from the Moors that the Spaniards got their distinctive dance, which spread through Europe and was known as the Moorish or Morisco dance. When it reached England it was modified by the native dance and took its place in history as the Morris dance. The only music for the Morris dance was provided by bells that the performers attached to their legs. It had no longer any religious or military significance, but was performed as an entertainment by strolling players. Among them the competitive idea sprang up and various star performers sought to outdo each other just as the Marathon dancers are doing to-day. Some years ago Max Berhohm wrote an article about one of the celebrated dancers of Queen Elizabeth's time, one William Kemp.

The Nine Days' Dance

William at the age of seventeen attained some fame by dancing all the way from Norwich to London. There he educated himself as an actor, but not a distinguished one, we gather, because he reverted to the Morris dance, and danced his way home again. He has left a quaint record of the event in a pamphlet entitled "Kemp's Nine Day's Wonder, performed in a dance from London to Norwich. Containing the pleasures, pains and mind of William Kemp, between London and that city, in his late Morrice." His dance was rather a pleasant one than not, for he was entertained by the nobles at night and in the daytime the peasants would keep him company in his dancing. In Sudbury he relates that "there came a lusty tall fellow, a butcher by his profession, that would in a Morrice keep me company to Bury. I gave him thanks, and forward we did set; but ere ever we had measured half a mile of our way he gave me over in the plain field, protesting he would not hold out with me; for, indeed, my pace in dancing is not ordinary. As he and I were parting a lusty country lass being among the people could him faint hearted out, saying, 'If I had begun to dance I would have held out one mile, though it had cost my life.' At which words many laughed. 'Nay,' saith she, 'if the dancer will lend me a least of his bells I'll venture to tread one mile with him myself.'"

Dance Mad

"I looked upon her, saw mirch in her eyes, heard boldness in her words, and held her ready to take up her russet petticoat; and I fitted her with bells, which she, merrily taking, garnish her thick short legs, and with a smooth brow, bade the labor begin. The drum struck; forward march with me merry Mayde Marian, who shook her stout sides and footed it merrily to Melford, being a long mile. There parting with her (besides her skinnfull of drinke) and English crowne to buy more drinke; for, good wench, she was in a pittious heate; my kindness she requited with dropping a dozen good courtesies, and bidding God bless the dancer. I bade her adieu; and to give her her due, she had a good care, daunt truly, and was parted for friends." Kemp, you perceive, wrote as well as he danced. It seems that he never wrote anything but this one delightful pamphlet. He died three years later in the thirtieth year of his age—died dancing, with his bells on his legs in the village of Ockley.

Dangers of the Marathon Dance

The dancing plague struck England in the middle of the fourteenth century and it is related that in London people danced until they fell unconscious in the streets. Many of them died. The present craze is therefore a revival having for its object publicity, though the normal person must wonder that value is set upon such publicity. Most of the American lunatics who have been breaking continuous records have not even been paid for their toil. Miss Cummings, a New York girl, who danced twenty-seven hours received nothing for it, but when she found a week later that her record had been broken she got $25 for staying on her feet for fifty hours. The craving for sleep, we learn, is the chief obstacle to the establishment of new dance records. The performers dance as slowly as possible, just dragging their feet over the floor. The dance can give them no pleasure, and must be infinitely boring to watch. The danger is that it may permanently impair the heart or spine, injuries not noticed at the time but likely to appear unexpectedly a few years later.

WITHOUT CONTENTMENT

Without contentment, what is life? Contented minds like bees can suck Sweet honey out of soot, and sleep Like butterflies on stone or rock. Contented minds are not in towns Where stars are far away and cold; That tremble till they almost fall, When they draw near to Nature's world.

Such quiet nights we'll have again, And walk, when early morning comes, Those dewy cemeteries, the fields—When they are white with mushroom toms.

BANDIT GANG RUNS FOUL OF PROVINCIAL POLICE

Border bank bandits attempted to rob the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Manyberries on Sunday morning. They were foiled in their attempt and a running fight with A. P. P. officers took place.

One of the bandits is believed to have been wounded. The robbers escaped in their high-powered car.

Police of "D" division, A. P. P. have instituted a thorough search for them. This is the first time the police of any of the prairie provinces have come to grips with the international bank bandits. This spring already the gang has robbed two banks, one at Dollard, Sask., and a few days later the bank at Mather, Man. Last year the gang robbed many banks along the border, including the Union Bank at Foremost, where they obtained a large sum in cash and negotiable securities.

Manyberries, June 4—The stage was all set for the gang of international bank robbers, who made an unsuccessful attempt on the local branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce early Sunday morning. It appears that the police had been tipped off that the gangsters were planning a night attack on the Manyberries bank, among others along the border and officers had been stationed at various points of vantage around the village. The bandits thus drove into the net, falling utterly in the latest attempt on Canadian border town banks.

A note in "Science" calls attention to a possible cause of the red in solar salt and brine. Recent investigations tend to indicate that the color is due to the microorganisms that thrive in a media containing not less than 15 per cent of salt by weight, and one in which the most favorable temperature is between 50 and 60 deg. Centigrade.

"Bridge-over" is a new ailment, said to follow strain in dealing out playing cards too often.

The Macleod Tennis Club Dance held in the G. W. V. A. Hall on Monday evening was a very pleasant affair. Owing to the floods the attendance was not so large as expected but then they hardly thought it would be. A large party from Granum was unable to get through and many country people were kept at home by the rain. Notwithstanding these disappointments a very enjoyable evening was spent in tripping the light fantastic. It is hoped that a similar function will be given during the season when the weather is more settled. The Tennis Club is greatly obliged to those who so kindly donated refreshments.

The Macleod and District Board of Trade will hold their first general meeting on Tuesday, June 19th at 8 o'clock p. m. at the Silver Grill. A fully attended meeting of the executive of the Macleod and District Board of Trade was held on Tuesday evening in the office of J. W. McDonald. Many matters vital to Macleod and District welfare were discussed and placed in channels from which progress toward their realization will be reported at the next general meeting on June 19th. It has been deemed undesirable to report executive meeting details before progress has been attained to the point of realization as such reports would be available to adverse interests and would possibly hinder ultimate success.
